PRICE OF AN OPINION.
In a cool night in November, in the year 1835, a man enveloped in a cloak, advanced at the door of one of the most distinguished advocates in Raleigh. He was quickly shown into the chamber of the learned lawyer.

"Sir," said he, placing upon the table a large parcel of papers, "I am rich, but the suit that has been instituted against me to-day will entirely ruin me. At my age, a fortune is not to be rebuilt; so that the loss of my suit will condemn me for ever to the most frightful misery. I come to ask the aid of your talents. Here are my papers; as to the facts, I will, if you please expose them to you."

The advocate listened attentively to the stranger; then opened the parcel, examined all the papers it contained, and said— "Sir, the action laid against you is founded in justice and morality. Unfortunately, in spite of the admirable perfection of our codes, law is for you. If, therefore, you rest strictly upon the law, and avail yourself without exception of all the means in your favor; if, above all, these means are exposed with clearness and force, you will infallibly gain this suit, and nobody can afterwards dispute the fortune which you feel to lose."

"Nobility in the world, replied the client, 'is so competent to do this business as yourself.' An opinion drawn up in this sense and signed by you, will render me invulnerable. I am bold enough to hope that you will not refuse it to me."

The skillful advocate reflected for some moments, and taking up among the papers which he had pushed away with an abruptness peculiar to him, said that he would draw the opinion, and that it should be finished the following day at the same hour.

The client was punctual to his appointment. The advocate presented him with the opinion, and without taking the trouble to reply to the thanks with which the other overwhelmed, said to him rudely—

"Here is the opinion; there is no judge, who, after having seen that, will condemn you! Give me 3,000 francs!"

"The client was struck dumb and motionless with surprise.

"You are free to keep your money," said the advocate, "as I am to throw my opinion in the fire."

"So speaking, he advanced towards the chimney; but the other stopped him, and declared that he would pay the sum demanded, but that he had only the half with him.

"Draw, in fact, from his pocket-book, 1500 francs in bank notes. The advocate with one hand took the notes, and with the other threw the opinion into the drawer.

"But," said the client, "I am going, if you please, to give you my note for the remainder."

"I want money. Bring me 1500 more francs, or you shall not have one line."

There was no remedy, and the 1500 francs were paid; but the client to revenge himself for being so pillaged, hastened to circulate this anecdote. It got into the papers, and for a fortnight there was a deluge of victims of all kinds upon the indifference of the great advocate. Those who did not laugh at it, said it was deplorable that a man of such merit should be tainted with a vice so degrading as avarice.

Even his friends were moved by it, and some of his friends went so far as to renege with him publicly; but the only reply he gave was by shrugging his shoulders, and then, as every thing is quickly forgot at Paris, people soon ceased to talk of this.

Ten years passed. One day the court of Session in its robes, was descending the place of justice, to be present at a public ceremony. All at once a female darts from her seat, and with a rapid step, she flew to the foot of the procurer general, seized the end of his robe, and pressed it to her lips. The woman was looked upon as deranged, and they tried to drag her away.

"Leave me alone, leave me alone," she cried. "I recognize him—it is my preserver! I thank him, I have been able to bring up my large family. Thanks to him my old age is happy. Oh, you don't know me!"

"One day—I was unhappy then—I was advised to bring an action against a distant relation of my late husband, who had possessed himself of a rich heritage that ought to have come to my children. Already I had sold half my goods to begin the action, when one evening I saw a gentleman enter my house, who said to me:

"Do not go to law; reason and morality are for you, but the law is against you. Keep the little you have, and let it be these 3,000 francs, which are truly yours." I remained speechless with surprise. When I would have spoken and thanked him he had disappeared; and the bag of money was there, upon the table, and the countenance of that generous man was engraved upon my heart, never to be erased. Well, I have this preserver of my family—here I am! Let me thank him before God and before men!"

The Court had stopped. The procurer general appeared moved, but conquering his emotion, he said: "Take away this good woman, and take care that no harm comes to her. I don't think she is quite right in her mind."

He was mistaken; the poor woman was not mad—only she had remembered, and M. Dupin had forgotten.

It is conducted on the mutual plan, each person insured becoming a member thereof, and not liable beyond the amount of his premium.

Policies for $100 to $5000 will be issued on the life of a white person; and on Slaves for two-thirds their market value, for a term of from one to five years, as the owner may desire.
